Does Bhutan have enough foreign currency to import cars?

Simply put, the import driven Bhutanese economy does not earn enough foreign currency to allow largescale car imports. While the public complain about the high prices of cars the high taxes of 2022 will be a blessing in disguise for the foreign reserves which stood at only USD 624.11 million in June 2024.

Why are car taxes increasing in Bhutan?

Since the advent of democracy car taxes have been increased in 2012, 2014 and 2022 all with the aims of safeguarding scarce foreign reserves, raising revenue and restricting the import of vehicles in general. Simply put, the import driven Bhutanese economy does not earn enough foreign currency to allow largescale car imports.

Why are vehicle prices rising in Bhutan?

Finance Minister Lekey Dorji attributed the recent surge in vehicle prices primarily to tax increases instituted by the previous government under the Tax Act of Bhutan 2022. "While our government has not introduced any new taxes since coming into power, the tax increases from 2022 are now becoming apparent," Lyonpo Lekey Dorji explained.
