Are UK solar panels a dumping ground for slave labour?

It means many of the modules used on UK homes and in solar farms may originate in Chinese slave labour. She said: “Solar is one of the most dirty and complicit industries in Uyghur blood labour. The UK is at risk of becoming a dumping ground for slave labour-produced solar panels as both the US and EU have taken action.

Are solar panels based on Chinese slave labour?

Ms Kearns warns that China has only achieved such prices by massive use of slave labour, including the 2 million to 3 million Uyghur and Kazakh citizens from the Xinjiang region who were placed into forced labour camps. It means many of the modules used on UK homes and in solar farms may originate in Chinese slave labour.

Are China's solar panels made from forced labour?

China strongly denies all claims its solar panels are produced using forced labour and in February its foreign ministry spokesperson said these allegations were among the “lies of the century”.

Why are Chinese solar panels a problem?

A critical component of Chinese solar panels is polysilicon that has regularly been produced by its persecuted Uyghur minority, trapped in forced labour schemes and subject to human rights abuses. The i Paper has mapped 84 non-residential locations where solar panels have been installed with links to alleged slave labour.

Are Uyghur solar panels being banned in the UK?

Alicia Kearns, chairman of the foreign affairs select committee, said that with the US and EU both passing laws to ban solar products made by Uyghur slave labour, many will end up in the UK where an estimated 98pc of solar panels are already Chinese made. The warning comes at a crucial time for the UK's burgeoning solar industry.

Why did great British Energy ban Chinese solar panels?

Earlier this year, growing concerns over Chinese panels linked to Uyghur oppression led Energy Secretary Ed Miliband to ban state-funded Great British Energy from using them, unless the company can "ensure that slavery and human trafficking is not taking place" in its business or supply chains.
